Leadership

In high school I was the Freshmen Class Vice President, and the following three years I was Class President. My senior year I also served as the Cross Country and Track and Field team captain. While serving as a missionary I spent several months in leadership positions that placed me in charge of 6-24 missionaries. I am currently the team leader for my BYU on-campus internship project. Throughout these experiences I learned how to lead and help others have success.

Communication

As class president I learned how to speak in important meetings and at large gatherings. As a missionary I learned how to have one on one interactions with strangers and learned how to make an instant connection with anyone. At the BYU Student Health Center I answer phone calls, respond to emails, and help anyone who walks into the business office. In my on-campus Internship I help coordinate the communication between my team and the sponsor company.

Organization

Throughout high school and my religious mission, I was required to organize events and activities such as: school dances, school activities, high school graduation, and large meetings of missionaries. For my on-campus internship I have been responsible for the creation of a 400+ hour work plan. These experiences taught me how to organize on a small and large scale to get the desired result.
